Nov. 19, 2018 – Los Angeles, Calif. - What is CBD? Will CBD get me high? Is there a difference between hemp and cannabis? Is using CBD a sin? Is CBD a drug? Is it harmful? These are a just a few questions Christians around the country are asking themselves now that hemp-based Cannabidiol, commonly known as CBD, is legal in most states.

GodsGreenery.com launched Nov. 19, 2018 and is the first online community where Christians can access reliable information, research, and stories about the uses of CBD - the non-psychoactive, natural components of hemp and cannabis (translation – it doesn't contain THC and therefore does not get you high). Understanding all of it can be overwhelming and exhausting, especially for Christians who may not understand the difference between CBD and cannabis and how it can fit into their lifestyle.

Because of potential health benefits, CBD products are rapidly becoming mainstream and are being sold in beauty salons, spas, fitness centers, membership-only warehouse clubs and more. However, finding a place for Christians to be safe, healthy and connected while making sense of all this information filtered through the lens of Faith has not existed - until now.

"GodsGreenery.com" grew from a desire to serve the Christian community," said chief executive officer, Michael Klein. "Creating this non-advocacy platform to host the discussion about CBD provides Christians with a place to learn more about the potential benefits and limitations of CBD in order to make informed decisions about if and how they might integrate it into their life."

GodsGreenery.com has produced and curated original stories, thought-provoking articles and news coverage of the latest scientific studies about the use of CBD to help this vast community make sense of the continuing development of all there is to know about the role these plants play in our society, filtered through a Faith-based lens.

The site includes a strong focus on real stories from Christians who use CBD for medical and spiritual needs, stories like that of GodsGreenery.com co-founder Rory Millikin, whose family turned to CBD to help free his brother from opioid addiction.

"After seeing CBD help my family and many others, I made it a personal mission to share these healing properties with the world," said Millikin.

Millikin quickly realized the voice of the Faith community was largely missing in the greater conversation about

CBD, and that many Christians are already exploring the potential benefits of these products. God's Greenery was born to help create a safe, factual, trustworthy place to explore CBD through a Christian perspective while offering solid research and resources to make informed decisions about how to use Cannabidiol (CBD).
